The real Crocodile Hunter

Steve Irwin was a famous conservationist and TV show host. He was born in Australia in 1962, and he grew up on his parents' wildlife park. Steve loved reptiles, and he got a python for his birthday when he was six years old! When Steve was older, he learned to work with crocodiles. In 1996, Irwin started his TV show, The Crocodile Hunter, and it became popular in many countries. On September 4, 2006, when Steve went to the Great Barrier Reef to film ocean animals, a stingray stung him. He died that day of cardiac arrest. People all over the world were sad when Steve Irwin died. Many people still remember his excellent work.
